Five Minutes for the Planet (From Salisbury Methodist Newsletter)

Did you know that every email you send, and all messages stored in your inbox, are using up energy? Here are a few good e-mail habits to keep your e-mail inbox clean and eco-friendly. Once a month, scan your inbox for old, unnecessary e-mails that you can delete. Empty the bin regularly (mine automatically deletes messages there after 30 days) Manage your subscriptions - Do some of them sit unopened in your inbox? In that case, it might be time to unsubscribe from them. Ovo Energy recently calculated that if every email user in the UK sent one less unnecessary email each day, it would reduce CO_2 emissions by 16,433 tonnes each year – which is the same as 81,152 flights between London and Madrid! Paul Butler

I must admit I never thought of this before, but am finding I get more and more e mails and try unsubscribing from some, but still find it impossible to deal with them all, we get some for the church trying to get it to invest in property and other things and I haven't yet worked out how to stop them.

Recycling Please remember to only put clean packets in the cupboard (dirty packets go in the bin) and if there isn't a box or a picture on the door then we no longer collect it.

Buildings update The kitchen units are now all put together and the wall units are fixed to the wall. We are now waiting for the electrician/
